The Apportionment Bill Called Up-Senator Pasco Offers Some Amendments to the Elections Bill-The Dolph Resolution.

The Morgan resolution calling for information relative to the payment of claims of John I. Davenport as supervisor of elections and as Greuit Court commissioner was taken up.

In this connection Mr. Hoar laid before the Senate a communication received from Davenport calling attention to charges made against him in the Senate and offering himself as a witness under oath to any committee desiring to examine him.

Mr. Gorman trusted that the Senator from Massachusetts would offer a resolution to investigate the conduct of Davenport, as requested by that gentleman.

Mr. Hoar replied that he had not considered the interest he information of the Senate.

sidered the matter. He merely presented the letter for the information of the Senate.

Mr. Gorman believed that when Mr. Davenport desired an investigation it should be accorded him.

Mr. Carliste said the Senator from Maryland had mistaken the terms of the letter.

Mr. Davenport did not request that his conduct be investigated, but simply expressed his willingness to go himself before a committee and make a statement. If Mr. Davenport's conduct was to be investigated in the regular way Mr. Davenport's communication did not indicate that any other persons should be heard.

The communication was referred, and Mr. Morgan's resolution was adopted.

The credentials of Mr. Pugh as a Senator from Alabama were presented.

A bill was passed authorizing the Bowling Green and NorthernRailroad Company to bridge the Green and Barren rivers, Kentucky.

The Senate then proceeded with the consideration of the Dolph resolution, providing for an investigation as to whether the right to vote is denied or abridged in any State; with the Vest amendment extending the investigation to an inquiry as to whether by State legislation any man had been denied the right to work on public works by reason of his color.

Mr. Morgan spake in opposition to the resolution until the merning hour expired, when the Effections bill was taken up, and Mr. Morgan continued his argument against it.

Senator Pasco proposed this morning an amendment to the Elections bill comprising two new sections. The first of these provides that it shall be unlawful to give or to promise to give any valuable consideration to induce a voter to vote or to refrain from voting; or to offer or promise him any appointment or office; to make any gift or payment to any person for his influence in procuring the election of any Representative or delegate; to advance or pay or promise to pay anything valuable to be used for any of these purposes, or to make contract for, or to receive it for any employer in paying his employes salaries or wages to enclose the money in an envelope upon which is written political motoes, devices or arguments; for any employers within ninety days of an election to put up in his establishment any bill threatening loss of work for not voting a particular ticket. The penalty for any of these acts is a fine of $500 or less, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both. Any person offending is a competent witness against any offer persons.

The second section provides that any officer of a political organization receiving mency from a candidate is to make a return of this money and what was done with it to the Clerk of the House of Representatives, and any candidate is to file with the Clerk an itemized statement of the cost of his election. The punishment for violating this section is the same as that provided in the preceding section. sing two new sections. The first of se provides that it shall be unlawful to

THE ELECTIONS BILL.

The Injection of Presidential Lymph Cannot Save It. The dreary and profitless discussion of the Elections bill went on again to-day in spite of the fact, now recognized even by its most devoted friends, that it is really dead.

The talk now going on hardly rises to the dignity of a funeral oration. It is rather the chatter and gossip of a wake.

The Elections bill is the President's favorite measure, and he is in deapair over its untimely decease, and is disposed to censure the doctors for not saving the poor thing's life. But that is impossible. Not even the injection of Presidential lymph by means of the message could do more than prolong its wretched life a few days.

lymph by means of the message could do more than prolong its wretched life a few days.

When the bill containing the plan of the Republican cancus for the financial relief of the country comes to hand, as it will one day this week, the Elections bil will be laid aside until after that measur be disposed of.

About that time the Appropriation bills will cover up, and the Elections bill will again ac made to stand aside. A few measures of general legislation will be disposed of, and the Elections bill will be left where it is to-day, on the flat of its back staring at the illuminated ceiling of the Senate Chamber.

It is thoroughly recognized that the Elections bill cannot pass the Senate in any form unless the rules of procedure of that body be changed. It is furthe recognized that the rules cannot be changed except in the manner pointed out in the rules themselves, unless through the, arbitrary action of the Presiding Officer, unfalteringly sustained by the majority of the Republicans no doubt are willing to change the rules, and can secure a cancus order to that effect, but who would preside? There's the rub.

When Vice-President Morton was approached on the subject, he said, in effect, that the would prefer they would get a more experienced man to preside; that that would be the better plan. This was simply Mr. Morton's diplomatic way of refusing to carry out the cancus dicum.

Mr. Ingalls was then approached. It is well known that he has the courage, provided his inclination coincided. His reply, in substance, was that he did not care to preside at a time and on an occasion when the Constitutional Presiding Officer declined to act.

Now, if neither Morton nor Ingalls will act, who will? Will any one?

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION. The Bill Proposed by the Republican Senatorial Cancus. Following the action of the committee of the Republican Senatorial caucus, which yesterday gave a long hearing to Secretary Windom, came the caucus itself last night at the residence of Senator McMillan. Nothing was considered except financial measures. No final conclusion was reached, but from the drift of the discussion it seems clear that the bill to be proposed will provide for the purchase of the 12,000,000 camers of silver now on the market at the rate of $3,000. chase of the 12,000,000 ounces of silver now on the market at the rate of $3,009,000 when the part of $3,009,000 when the part of $4,500,000 now required to be beinght by law; also for the parchase of enough silver buillion additional to make up for the retirement of national-bank notes whenever they full below $180,000,000 treasury notes based on the buillion to be issued in their stead, and if buillion for this latter purpose cannot be had, ordinary Treasury notes to be issued.

The cancus also favored the recoinage of trade dollars, there being about $5,000,000 of them, and of the subsidiary coin, o which there is about $20,000,000.

There are some other minor matter which will doubtless be included in the bill, such as charging cost for converting gold coin into bars, to make the expense of the exportation of gold that much of the exportation of gold that much greater.

The much-talked-of 2 per cent bonds, either inter-convertible or to run for a term of years, which finds so much favor in the financial minds of Secretary Win-dom and Senator Sherman, will not be adopted by the caucus. By inter-con-vertible is meant that any person having legal tender notes can go and buy these bonds, or having these bonds can go to the Treasury or sub-treasury and get notes.

bonds, or having these bonds can go to the Treasury or sub-treasury and get notes.

It looks like converting the Treasury into a savings bank, with the rate of interest at 2 per cent. A good deal may be said in favor of this plan, perhaps, but it hasn't the ghost of a chance of getting through Congress at this session. It might possibly pass the Senate, though, from the expressions in the caucus last night of some of the Senators, that is extremely doubtful, but it certainly would be repeted by the House. There is a deep-rooted opposition in the minds of many-perhaps a majority of the Representatives—against any increase of the bonded indebtedness of the Government.

A prominent Republican, one who was re-elected, too, said this morning.

"I am opposed to the issuance of bonds in times of peace. In times of war they are a necessity to raise money, but there is neither necessity nor excuse for them at this time, and I shall vote against any proposition looking to their issue. I am willing to vote for an issue of Treasury notes equal in amount to the proposed bond issue, these notes to remain in the Treasury until absorbed in the usual way in the channels of trade."

That is an index of the feeling as to the further issuance of bonds. It is such that any bond scheme, no matter how strongly or plausibly urged, will fail in the House
If not in the Senate.

The caucus meets again to-morrow night.

MICHAEL DAVITT HURT.

THE TRUSH LEADER WOUNDED IN-MELEE AT BALLYNAULL.

He and Parnell Address Rival Meetings and a Riot Ensues-Fighting at the Head of His Followers-Intense Excitement in Dublin.

DUBLIN, Dec. 16 .- Intense excitement has been created here by the receipt of news of a serious conflict at Ballynahill and the wounding of Michael Davitt.

Mr. Parnell was addressing a meeting at that place to-day, while at the same place and time another meeting was being addressed by Messes. Davitt and Tanner. close together were the meeting places that the voices of the orators of one party were plainly audible to those of the other.

The speeches were of a most violent character, and the words of the speakers were interrupted by cheers, insulting jeers and defiant cries. Mr. Parnell's appearance was the signal for a mighty outburst of applause from his adherents. The arrival of their leader, coupled with the galling taunts of their opponent, seemed to excite the Parnellites to fury, and with a wild and sudden rush they threw themselves upon the opposition meeting. Promptly jumping from the speaker's platform Davitt and Tanner, with the priests by their sides, placed themselves at the head of their friends, and fighting desperately and fiercely drove back the attacking Parnellites. Sticks, clubs and stones were freely used, and Davitt, while pressing on in the front of his supporters, received a severe scalp wound. Many others are known to have been more or less severely injured, but nothing more than the most meagre details are yet to

The War Department Receives Many Dispatches Regarding It. War Department officials were busy to-day receiving and answering telegrams on day receiving and answering telegrams on the Indian situation. A feeling of grati-fication seemed to pervade the Depart-ment over the death of Sitting Bull, who was regarded as the brains of the recent Indian uprising. The effect of his death was very generally discussed, but rather in the light of apprehension for the future.

in the light of apprehension for the future,
Major-General Schoffeld, in a short talk with a representative of the United Press, said that "the killing of Sitting Bull would tend to strengthen the loyal Indians in their support of the Government, but what effect it would have on the Indians in revolt only events could determine."

St. Paul and Billy Murray of this city, 110pound men, took place carly this morning near Stamford, Conn., and was witnessed by 300 sports from this city and vicinity.
The fight was for $1,000 a side. The men were in perfect form. Kennard was handied by Joe McAuliffe, and Joseph Quinn did the honors for Murray. Frank Stevenson acted as referee.

Kennard began the fighting, Murray acting on the defensive, but up to the eighth round very little execution was done. The eighth, however, was a rattler.
It was give and take all through. Murray had a shade the best of the round. After this there was a ball until the twelfth round, when there was another rattling set-io. Kennard had much the best of this round. He landed heavily on Murray's stomach and face time and again, and had Murray groggy before the call of time.
Murray planted many blows in Kennard's face during this round, but they lacked

Both men were comparatively fresh when time was called for the thirteenth round. Kennard began rushing matters, and put in some heavy blows. He soon had his man dazed, and before the round was half over he got in a stinger on Murray's jaw, completely knocking him out. About $3,000 changed hands.

In all the years since the first production of the wonderful old comedy of him who was accredited with the best play, the best of the wonderful old comedy of him who was accredited with the best play, the best farce, the best comic opera, and the grandest oration of his time, it is doubtful if "The Hivals" ever had a worthier representation than that of last evening. It is perhaps the highest possible tribute to the versitle and immortal ganius of Richard Brinsley. Sheridan that the wit and humor and aubtle touches of the human nature of a hundred and twenty years ago can still move an American audience to mirth and laughter in only less degree than a man falling through a skylight or being hit with a stuffed club in a Hoyt farce-comedy. Last night's audience at all events developed all these graffying symptoms of intelligent enjoyment with a fervor that left little room for question of its sincerity. The marvelous art and subtle skill of Joseph Jefferson are at their best in the whimsical humor and more whimsical terrors of "fighting" Bod Jerse, and time has added a mellow charm to this ever memorable impersonation, which, if possible, enhances its familiar merits. It is a very high order of artistic attainment which achieves its results by methods so fine and true; a look, an intonation, a gesture so quiet and natural as to be hardly noticeable till a tical wave of inextinguishable laughter sweeps the house from its anchorage of propriety. As wonderful as ever are those eloquent and electric eyes, and the facial changes which are epics without words, while the genial and lovable personality of the man permeates with magnetic life and thrill the work and consummate art of the actor.

The "personal equation" is, as always, an even stronger factor in the nachievements of Mr. Florence, and it is the work and consummate art of the actor.

The "personal equation" is, as always, an even stronger factor in the achieve means of Mr. Florence, and it is the actor.

The "personal equation" is, it is in all respects a worthy companion piece to the Aeves of Mr. Jefferson, and the triumvirate of greatness, with apologies to the sex, would not be complete without the immortal Mrs. Malaprop of Mrs. John Drew. It is still as we have so long known it the same priceless and clean-cut cames of dramatic art, the secret of which will perish with the artist and the gem itself only remain in the cabinet of memory. It is not well, as Mrs. Malaprop herself felicitionsly observes, "to anticipate the past" or pose in the ungracious role of laudater temporis acti. But it should be remembered that with this matchless trio we will very nearly bid farewell to the grand old comedy of legitimate art and traditions. There is no Joseph Jefferson the fourth to continue the succession, and no where from the ranks of the "trouser" drama or the glorified variety show which now hold the stage, does there seem reasonable assurance of perpetuation.

Of the Sir Authony Absolute of Mr. F. C.

seem reasonable assurance of perpetuation.

Of the Sir Authony Absolute of Mr. F. C. Rangs, and the less prominent David of Mr. George Denham, it is proper to say that they were genuine comedy creations worthy to rank with the very best in the past. Miss Viola Allen was an interesting Lydia Longuish and Mr. Frederick Paulding as Captain Absolute, and Miss Lombard and Messrs, Ross and Warren in the minor roles were so entirely competent that the play, as a whole, was given with all the smoothness of finish of the best of the old-time companies. "The Rivals" will be presented this and Wednesday evenings and at the Saturday matinee, and the "Heir-at-Law" on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights.

"The Liliputlans" at Albaugh's.

The very novel exotic which burst into

The very novel exotic which burst into bloom under the fostering care of Manabloom under the fostering care of Manager Albaugh last night at the Grand Opera House was Liliputian, indeed, as to its personal, but wholly vest and Brobdingnagian as a dramatic surprise and success. The large and appreciative audience was as exceptional in some respects as the performance, and the Diplomatic Corps and Washington society, in full dress from the Porter-Campbell wedding, and our substantial German-speaking fellow-citizens were very equally represented. The good points of the Teutonic humor of the play found ready response from such an assemblange, and the applause and laughter were well nigh continuous. It certainly was a very amusing entertainment and well worthy the favor with which it was received.

well worthy the lavor was and women, received.

Ten fumny little men and women, whose aggregate length would not reach half-way across the big stage of Albaugh's, for nearly three hours gave opera, burlesque, farce, pantomime and ballet, in a style that would have been highly creditable in the same number of first-class artists of the regulation size. It was a comic opera troupe in petto, and the inst-class artists of the regulation size. It was a comic opera troupe in petto, and the acting, singing and dancing very much more artistic than we too often find them from Thespians big enough to do better. By long (?) odds, the biggest man in the cast, by virtue of his being the smallest, was Mr. Franz Ebert, whose tricksome Pieck was one of the funniest little chaps conceivable, and whose colossal spree and great disrobing act fairly convulsed the house with laughter. The quaint little Tyrolese, Mesers. Wolf and Zink and Miss Toni Meister, were scarcely less diverting, and, indeed, all the midget prime downe, touori and suppositious basic covered their minute selves with glory.

The minor personages of the play are, in a measure, the major ones, inasmuch as, to the last good looking ballet girl, they would appear to have been selected with a view to height and contrast. "The Pupil in Magic," as the drama is entitled, ranges, geographically, all the way from Berlin via the North Pole to the realms of Fairy Land, and musically from "Lohengrin" and "Tannhaeuser" to the "Grand Duchesse" and "Mikado." Altogether it is so bright and novel that it should crowit the house through the week.

Don't Want Ugly Soldiers.
From the London Daily Telegraph.

Ugliness, as a disqualifying cause, seems intelligible in a candidate for matrimony, but is certainly less so when the question is one of titness for military service. This, however, is one on the list of disqualifications laid down, by the head of the Mesileal Department in the manual just issued on "Conscription in France." Latterly the French authorities seem to be much more liberal in admitting the claims of men who do not wish to serve The rejections are 5 per cent, more numerous than of the previous conscription. The French are looking more to the multitary doctor, makes a man rediculous, prevents him from having authority over his comrates and leaves him morbid and sensitive. If the ugliness be adequate the claim must be allowed. "Male hysteria" is another valid plea. The army doctors say it exists among French conscripts, and it is the more objectionable as it is contagious.

On the morning of the 5th instant Porter, who drives a wagon for the Porter, who drives a wagon for the Great Falls Ice Company, ran over and badly injured Miss Kate Fletcher, at the corner of M street and Connecticut avenue. Miss Fletcher, who was riding a bicycle, said that she gave the driver of the wagon plenty of room to pass her, but he was driving at a rapid rate of speed. A number of other witnesses who saw the accident stated that it might have been avoided. Mr. Key measured the distance between the curb and the bicycle and made it eighteen feet. Mass Fletcher is still suffering from the injuries received. Porter, in his defense, explained that Miss Fletcher seemed to have lost control of her wheel, and attempted to turn in the same direction that he did, and that it was almost impossible to get out of the way.

In giving his decision Judge Miller shid the law of the District required that all vehicles should be driven on the right side of the street. In this instance the lady was on the wrong side and the icewagon on the right side, otherwise the accident could have been avoided. The defendant was dismissed.

Sunday morning Peter St. George, of that place, gave the alarm that his wife was missing. Search was instituted, and the missing woman was sooil found in the woodshed, hanging by the neck, and stiff and cold. The husband was at once suspected as the murderer. Some of his neighbors oven went so far as to accuse him openly of the crime.

The verdict of the coroner's jury was reached at about 10 o'clock, and it was claimed that the death of Mrs. St. George was due to murder by unknown hands.

The officers at once forced their way to St. George's retreat, in the second story of a low cottage, where he had spent most of the day, only to be further horrified by a suicide. A razor had done the work. His throat was cut from ear to ear, and death must have resulted instantly. Domestic troubles are alleged as the cause for the shocking deeds.

Commissioners' office.

Stewart was arrested last night by Lieutenant Smith of Alexandria and turned over to the custody of Detective Horne, who locked him up at the First Precinct station. It appears that Stewart and Loving have been drinking together for a number of days and spending money lavishly. Stewart denies that he stole any money, but admitted that he helped Loving spend quite a lot of it in this city and Alexandria. The case was called in the Folice Court this morning and a continuance taken.

A Royal Betrothal. London, Dec. 16.—The Standard's Berli correspondent says that the betrothal of Prince Christian, of Denmark, and Prin-cess Margaret, of Prussia, will shortly be

A Very Pretty Story.
From the New York Sun.
The army of colored employes in the various departments threaten to make a united protest against the long-established custom of compelling them to act as house servants outside of office hours. Nearly every chief of a division has as a dining-room servant a colored employe of the Government. When a colored man is appointed to a place as a laborer or messenger it is nearly always a necessary qualification that he is a good waiter. In the morning, before the hour for him to begin work, he goes to the residence of the official to attend the furnaces, sweep the steps, and serve breakfast to the family. After this he reports to the department, where he remains until 4 o'clock, when he again returns to his employer's residence and serves dinner. If a man should refuse to be used in this way, and occasionally one does, he is immediately discharged for his insubordination.

discharged for his insubordination. There is an official in the Treasury Department who has five of the Government's employes to act as servants about his house before and after hours. He has sons and daughters in society, and the little suppers which he often gives are always served by colored men, who are messengers and laborers in his department. There is even a Cabinet officer under President Harrison who has his dinners served every day by a messenger in his department of the public service. The messenger complains bitterly to his intimate friends about this, but he is careful to wear a pleasant smile while doing his household work for fear of losing the little place he holds at $720 a year. This messenger was once a member of the Legislature of his State, and he came on here as a leading Republican, deserving well of his party. This recommendation did not go as far toward securing him his place as messenger as did the fact that he had been brought up as a waiter in a Southern centernas s family. brought up as a waiter in a Southern gentleman's family.

"Mustache" a Test Word.

From the New Fork World.

A purist remarked yesterday, in the course of a discussion on accents and phrases indicative of New York city, that a word which tested the education of a speaker very brondly was mustache. There is no more certain sign of an incomplete education," he said, "than this word indicates. If the speaker says mustache his doen is sealed. It is the custom in the West, by the way, to a very great extent, to gives this erroneous and vulgar accent on the first syllable. Western people also have a habit of saying Broadway, which indicates the section of the country which they hall from. In Chicago and the Northwest they invariably pronounce it Broadway. In the Southwest the Southern accent on the 'o' makes a distinction. There are, in fact, a great many oddities of inflection and emphasis on this particular word by out-of-town people, though it is apparently the simplest combination of words imaginable.

Instead of a boom there was a marked selling and prices declined steadily under an outflow of stocks.

At 11 o'clock the decline ranged from to 1½ per cent. Dealings were confined to about a dozen stocks, however, notably Union Pacific, Rock Island, Missouri Pacific, St. Paul, Union Pacific Louisville and Nashville, Northern Pacific preferred, Burlington and Rock Island.

Union Pacific was the feature of the second hour's business. It was freely pressed for sale and fell 2½ per cent. below last night's figures. The remainder of the list shaded off fractionally. At this writing the market is heavy. Sales 125,600 shares.

I think that the best color line that negro can draw is the frazzled end of a half-inch rope over the angular proporthan linear rope over the angular propor-tions of a feeorgia mule. It won't do, people, to allow the third and fourth to become wards of the nation. No, not even if tickets to Africa should spring to $2.
